Description

Georgian oak pot board dresser This George III oak pot board dresser base was made circa 1810. This was not in a humble estate cottage but in one of the important kitchens of one of the large farmhouses on a country estate. Our example here is a wonderful golden honey colour with an unusual drawer formation, consisting of 3 drawers under the top and then 3 small drawers under. The lower small drawers make the stepped fronts that join the front turned lags and the pot-board. There are also the pierced fret brackets at the shoulders that were influenced by the Chinese Chippendale style. These are fabulous and versatile items that are wonderful pieces to place in your home. They can be used in hallways, drawing rooms, dining rooms and kitchens, providing not only great display and storage also they enhance the home. Imagine the enjoyment you will gain having ownership of this as well as the pride when you show it off to your family and friends.
