The artist's use of rich, bold colours, idealised rural scenes and the sensual innocence of his female subjects were no doubt influenced by the emerging Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood, founded in 1848. The Pre-Raphaelite's viewed themselves as a reforming movement, consciously harking back to the Classicalism practised in 15th century Italy, whereby lavish detail, a preoccupation with nature and simply indulging in the aesthetic possibilities of the human form, dominated the artwork produced. Edward died in 1899. His paintings continue to excite and entrance buyers from around the world.
