Description

These are a very smart pair of antique colonial armchairs. I have tried to do some research into these as they are very unusual and both have the Royal crest on the head rest. My feeling is these were given to a dignitary or someone part of the order of the garter for years of service and with the colonial nature to the details it is most likely for someone who worked in Africa or India. The quality is very fine with no faults and just an attractive patina to the timber which looks like teak or something similar. The design is very smart and although these date to the early 20th century they really could sit in a number of spaces. The upholstery is a green velvet with minor age related marks. We can change this should you prefer. Height 139cm Width 70cm Depth 65cm Depth of seat 54cm Height of seat 42cm Price includes UK mainland delivery
