Description

This Early 19th Century mahogany carver chair (Circa 1830) is a particularly fine and decorative example - the combination of an appealing design, fine craftsmanship and detailing, together with an attractive old leather upholstered seat, lifts it above many of its peers. It would make a perfect desk / study chair or compliment an existing set within the dining room. Its decorative mahogany frame and robust beechwood rails (underside of the seat) are in excellent original condition.
