Description

This desirable soapstone group of three rabbits was made in China and dates to the late 19th century. It is well carved and depicts a mother and two young rabbits playing together whilst eating a leafy snack. It has its original carved hardwood stand. Soapstone has a similar appearance to marble but is a softer material that lends its self to artistic carvings of this type. These items were a popular export in the late 19 and early 20th century from China. Signed on the base.
