Description

A good quality four-tier mahogany whatnot dating from the early 19th century. It has elegant turned supports with a single drawer in the base and it stands on small brass castors. The top can be lifted and has an easel style back which allows it to be used as a reading or music stand. It is in good condition for its age and is a good quality piece with lovely rich timbers. There are signs of age and use, some marks and stains on the surfaces and some light surface scratches but no major damages and it has a nice aged patina. It has been cleaned and gently polished and is ready for use. The best description comes from the photos so please look at them all carefully and if you have any questions just ask.
