 Height: 29.25", 74 cms. Lit: Susan Stuart "Gillows of Lancaster and London 1730-1840" pl. 242 shows a table dating from 1825 with an identical leg and numerous other examples of pieces with this exact leg. Note: The design for a "Universal Table" appears in Thomas Sheraton's s "The Cabinet-Maker and Upholsterer's Drawing-Book" published in 1793. He went on to describe it thus: "The use of this piece is to answer the purpose of both a breakfast and dining-table. When both the leaves are slipped under the bed, it will then serve as a breakfast-table; when one leaf is out, as in this view, it will accomodate five ...
