Description

A pair of gorgeous antique 14ct gold sapphire cluster drop earrings from the Edwardian era. These lovely earrings each feature a daisy cluster of seven cornflower blue sapphires set on a long bar, connected to a gold stud. These pretty earrings will dangle below the ear, allowing the light to catch them from all angles and glint as they move. Super examples of Edwardian jewellery in excellent condition. A part of our antique sapphire earrings collection. SPECIFICATIONS Sapphires total carat weight approx. 1.50 carat Length. 35mm Cluster diameter. 10.5mm Weight. 2.4 grams Tests as 14k gold ERA Edwardian (1901 – 1910) CONDITION Excellent. These antique 14ct gold sapphire cluster drop earrings are in an overall superb condition. These earrings must have been treasured as they have been well cared for. The sapphires are free from blemishes, housed safely in their setting and the metalwork is all in excellent order. The butterflies are 18ct gold and are later additions. A fine pair of earrings from the Edwardian or perhaps late Victorian era.
