Description

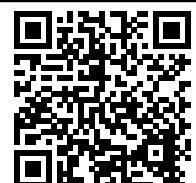

This is a large antique estate hunt cabinet of superior traditional craftsmanship. An English, carved oak mirror back sideboard, dating to the late Victorian period, circa 1900. Superior proportion to this Devonshire estate made cabinet. Displays a desirable aged patina and presented in fine order. Select oak shows fine grain interest throughout with enthusiastically carved scenes. Deep russet hues beam beneath a wax polish finish. Striking crown moulding adorned with carved frieze displaying wild creatures. Galleried upper with tapering columns framing the trio of mirrors. Wonderfully bevelled mirror plates with wonderfully minimal foxing. Useful sideboard with generous top, sits ahead of a trio of frieze panels. Trio of drawers dressed with brass drop handles over rectangle backplates. Carved field panel doors, the central panel presents a fox in woodland. Doors dressed with brass escutcheons with inset working locks — keys present. Raised upon shaped ogee bracket feet to each corner. This is an impressively large antique estate hunt cabinet, with superb height and a wonderful mirror back. Attractive russet hues and quality carved animal details abound. Solid joints and construction.
