Description

Rarely does the opportunity come along to acquire a truly iconically designed piece that represents its era so well as this superb Art Deco three door triple wardrobe. Dating to the 1930's the quality throughout this piece is of the highest spec with no expense spared and will easily integrate in both modern and period home settings. The exterior offers all the spectacle and impressiveness one hopes of from this era, with its stepped frontage, the contrasting veneers of blonde birds eye maple against figured American walnut, boarded with ebonised panels and plinth. To add to the overall geometric feel are linear lines of contrasting veneers which decorate each door in both the horizontal and vertical. Still retaining its original handles are four long bakelite and chrome bar handles. The sides of the robe are also veneered in walnut and are of similar quality to the front. For those who require maximum storage to cater for the most avid buyer of clothes is an amazing amount of internal storage. The very generously sized interior is an absolute delight offering the perfect space for your clothes and accessories. The left and middle section is the hanging area with orig...
