Description

Made from solid silver and glass, this antique hip flask has smooth rounded edges and a crocodile skin cover with a central window. The conker brown crocodile skin has no tears and the seams are tight. Surrounding the bottom half of the flask is a solid silver cover which slips on and off, making all parts easily washable. The lid is hinged and turns to fit the catch on the inside for security. The whole piece is usable with no issues, and given its age is in very good condition, despite minor surface scratches due to general wear. All pieces are clearly and fully hallmarked Sheffield 1909.
