Description

Manner of Peter Lely, a 17th Century British School, Portrait of Charlotte Stanley, Countess of Derby, three-quarter length, standing beside a table wearing a bejewelled orange taffeta robe, with pearl necklace and earrings and holding a white rose in her hand, oil on panel. Remains of a paper label to the reverse inscribed 'Charlotte de La Tremoille, Countess of Derby', within a 19th century ebonised frame with gilt slip. 31.5cm x 26cm (41.5cm x 36.5cm including frame) Charlotte Stanley, Countess of Derby (1599 - 1664) was born at the chateau of Thouars, Poitou, in France. She was the daughter of the French nobleman Claude de La Trémoille, 2nd Duke of Thouars, and his wife, Countess Charlotte Brabantina of Nassau. Her maternal grandparents were William I, Prince of Orange, and Charlotte de Bourbon. Charlotte married James Stanley, 7th Earl of Derby in 1626. Her husband was a Royalist commander in the English Civil War, later taken prisoner at Nantwich in 1651 and beheaded at Bolton. Lady Derby was famous for her defence of Lathom House in the Siege of Lathom House by Parliamentary forces during the First English Civil War in 1644. During the absence of her husband, sh...
