Description

A Fabulous early 19th century Louis XV design Boulle clock on pedestal signed Dubuc, The clock with beautifully worked signed gilt metal dial with white enamel Roman numeral cartouches, the twin train signed movement with counter wheel striking on a bell. The case with inlaid Boulle work, glazed sides and applied gilt scrolls and leaves surmounted with a gilt metal figure. Glazed door with a gilt metal bezel above mythical lyre playing cubit support. All ormolu casting of the finest quality. A conforming pedestal with applied fabulous gilded ormolu mounts above a tapering panel with brass line inlay work against a ebonised ground, raised upon a plinth base and ormolu bracket feet. This clock was made by Jacques Nicolas Pierre François Dubuc, a bronzier/ clockmaker, who from 1806 to 1817 is recorded as working on Rue Michel-le-Comte. Jacques' younger brother, Jean-Baptist Charles Gabriel Dubuc (d. 1819), was also a clockmaker, and the two were distinguished by the designations of "le jeune" (the younger) and "l'ainé" (the elder). The Parisian clockmaker Nicolas-Pierre-François Dubuc, was active in Paris from the final years of the reign of Louis XVI to the early y...
