Description

Edwardian satinwood curio cabinet This Edwardian satinwood curio cabinet was made circa 1900, it is glazed on the top and all four sides so that you can view your special and cherished collection from many angles. The satinwood glazed lid has ebony stringing and has a fine band of rosewood crossbanding running around the border. The lid opens on hinges to allow you to gain access to the velvet lined interior. The bijouterie cabinet stands on tapering line inlaid legs with spade feet When a cabinetmaker uses satinwood, it is a sign that cost was not the first consideration. In the main solid satinwood, as it is a expensive and desirable timber, when this was used it was only on the top end items. Just imagine the pleasure this stunning cabinet will give you and the display opportunities it will give you. 61cms wide 24ins 45cms deep 17 3/4ins 79cms high 31 ins All dimensions are approximate, whilst we take as much care as possible, we can be marginally out.
