Description

This 18th-century dresser rack is in oak. It has three graduated shelves with a brace in the centre. The shelves have a D mould to the front which stands proud 10 mm. This is in order to stop items sliding off the shelf. The moulded cornice is finished with a herringbone inlay and a dental mould. The top shelf is 22 cm wide the lower two shelves are 14 cm. The gap between the top shelf and the cornice to the widest point is 25 cm. The next shelf down is 28 cm and the next shelf is 28 cm the gap between the bottom shelf and where the piece would stand is 17 cm. This piece is 171 cm wide without the cornice. We have a similar one in our busy family kitchen and they look great mounted on the wall; I would suggest that this one is fixed with mirror plates and I am happy to provide these. Hi selling antiques. It won't let me turn the photographs round, which were the right way it has turned it turned around itself st 3246
