Description

A wonderfully intricate late Victorian brooch. The raised central circle is set with a trio of bright and white old mine cut diamonds and sits within a long marquise shaped brooch adorned with decorative gold granules and scroll detailing. It is likely that this was originally intended to be used as a mourning brooch, but the empty cavity (viewable to the back of the brooch through a clear window) shows no evidence of holding hair or any other memento. Cut – Old mine cuts. Colour – F to G. Clarity – VS2. Carat – Each diamond is approximately 0.05 carat. Dated – 1900 Measurements – From one end of the brooch to the other is 4.5cm and is 18.8mm at the widest point. Metal – 15k gold. Full hallmarks from the Chester Assay, dated 1900.
