Description

A beautiful antique inlaid rosewood Edwardian writing table. This was made in England, it dates from around the 1890-1910 period. It is of superb quality and is a lovely size. There is an inset tooled red leather writing surface and a lift up lid on the top that contains a fitted compartment. The single drawer has lovely brass handles, this sits on tapered stretched legs with a rosewood lower tier. The rosewood grain patterns are absolutely stunning all over, even on the back which is also nicely polished. We have recently had this re-polished, the condition is excellent for its age.
