Description

An attractive porcelain perfume bottle likely dating from c.1900 and featuring a beautiful woman with purple flowers in her upswept hair. The bottle is topped with a metal collar with a beaded chain and ring so that it could be suspended from a lady's chatelaine or chain. The piece is in good condition with no chips or cracks to the bottle or the tiny stopper. The lady is a little worn but lovely details such as her necklace and headband are still visible. There would originally have been a little metal cap to cover the glass stopper, which fits snugly in the neck and renders the bottle still usable today. Size: The total piece is approximately 8cm drop and the bottle (including stopper) measures around 2 x 3.8cm. Weight: 10.9g.
