Description

A generously sized pair of cast iron urns dating from the late 19th century. These antique planters have a rolled scalloped edge, a baluster column and stand on a round fluted base. In a previous life they stood on pillars at the entrance to a country house and retain the fixing holes, these can be seen in the photographs. The condition is very good. A superb pair of garden urns/planters that would be equally at home outside or indoors. Circa 1880
