Description

Here is a good quality large English beech adjustable artist's painting easel, from the George V period, circa 1930, in good original condition. Constructed with two vertical structural stiles and a central adjustable bar that slides up and down, the top of the picture frame is secured by a height adjustable wooden clamp, which the height can be adjusted by undoing a large brass threaded screw. The central spine of the painting easel features a threaded steel bar, allowing the easel to rise and fall, by winding the crank handle. With the ability to display either small or large pictures, this is ideal for a variety of pictures sizes to be displayed. The painting easel can display large pictures frames up to a height of 140 cm, therefore it can accommodate large pictures! The base of the picture frame is supported by a wide sill that will accommodate a picture frame up to 140 cm deep. Below, is a full width working drawer, ideal for storing paint brushes. The artists easel base is constructed on a large twin block, united by two stretchers, raised on its original castors. Adjustable brass threaded screws are can used to lift the easel clear off the floor on all four...
