Description

This is a fine quality antique English Georgian oak corner cupboard, incorporating mahogany and satinwood inlaid and of superior design, designed to be wall hung, circa 1800, in excellent original condition. The Georgian oak corner cupboard comprises a moulded protruding cornice decorated with dentil work, with mahogany banding below decorated with diamond shape satinwood string inlay, incorporating a central shell inlaid motif, flanked by ebony string inlay. The two boarded doors below are decorated with delightful oak beading, featuring inverted quarter circles in the corners. Each of the quadrants are adorned with satinwood inlaid shell motifs, on a background of stunning oak quarter sawn panels, which boast lovely medullary rays. The door bords are edged with mahogany banding and satinwood and ebony string inlay. The doors retain their original brass butt hinges and brass shaped key escutcheon. The right-hand door features a brass working lock, with working key. On the inside of the left-hand door is a sliding brass bolt, to secure the door. The doors open to reveal three shaped shelves, useful for storing drinks glasses. Three delightful drawers can be found...
