Description

An Egyptian revival timepiece in a gilded and bronzed case. The four pillared eight day movement with a cylinder escapement is housed in a drum case mounted behind a crisp white enamel dial with roman numerals and blued steel shape hands. The drum is raised on an engraved pedestal and surmounted by a bronzed bust of a pharaoh, flanked by a pair of seated sphinx with bronzed wings and headdresses and gilded bodies on a marble base. Dating from the late 19th Century this is a rare example of the egyptian revival style when the interest in all things egyptian was re-ignited after the opening of the Suez Canal in 1869. 19.5cm H 14.5cm W x 7cm D This clock comes with our two year guarantee.
