Description

For your consideration and for those gents out there who aspire to something not only of good quality but represents true Art Deco in it's styling not just noted for when it was made and in great condition, then this wrist watch maybe what you're seeking. Made by Glycine and dating between 1920 - 1929 this manual winding watch originates from Switzerland and runs on 15 jewels. The 14k white gold filled casing is beautifully engraved to the sides. A good sized dial for modern day use, originally as a dress watch but works equally well for day wear for the dapper gentleman out there. This watch is in remarkable condition for it's age, 90 odd years and no scratching to the glass crystal, no wear through the gold or back plate. If this watch wasn't perfect enough it has an expandable strap which actually feels genuinely nice to wear. This watch has just been fully and professionally serviced so will serve the new owner for many years again. FREE UK delivery, sent in a gift presentation box. If you would like to see a short video of this watch please email us. History Founded as Fabrique d'Horlogerie La Glycine in 1914 by Swiss watchmaker Eugène Meylan, Glycine initially spec...
