Dimensions (ins) 19 wide x 13.75 deep x 28.75 high William & Charles Wilkinson were sons of the renowned cabinet maker William Wilkinson. In the early 1820s Charles and his older brother William Ayscough Wilkinson joined their father's firm. After the father's death the two brothers changed the name of the firm from Wilkinson & Sons to W & C Wilkinson. Their work was as prolific as it was in their father's time, and they continued to receive significant commissions. In 1834/5 they received a commission worth over eight thousand pounds to equip the new Goldsmiths' Hall with furniture designed by the architect Philip Hardwick, much of which still resides in the Hall today. The furniture produced for the Court Room and the Co...
