Description

A fine quality George III flame mahogany 8 day longcase clock by Bateman of Great Tower Street London. Maker: Andrew Bateman was Apprenticed in 1776 and made Livery of the Clockmakers Company in 1812. He died in 1816. The high quality "Gentleman's Library" style case veneered in beautifully figured flame mahogany. The break arch hood surmounted with a stepped pediment with a cast brass finial, below canted stop fluted corners with brass reeding. The convex circular glass bound with locking cast brass bezel. The hood sides with glass viewing windows. The razor edge moulded long trunk door with choice curled mahogany veneers, flanked by canted corners with brass reeded inlay. The moulded edge raised panel to the base with London style double plinth and pad feet. The convex circular white enamelled dial signed Bateman, Great Tower Street, London to the centre. The fully restored high quality movement of eight day duration, the shaped plates united by five knopped pillars, anchor escapement and strikes the hours on a single bell. Brass cased weights and heavy brass bob pendulum with gilded wooden rod. Finely cut blued steel hands. The movement is fully restored by our ...
