Description

Here is a fine quality antique English Victorian oak desk chair, circa 1860, which has newly upholstered in leather and is in excellent condition. The chair has been newly upholstered in top quality full grain sage green leather. The Victorian oak desk chair boasts an elegant curved leather scroll back, finished with deep buttoning, secured to carved side supports and a carved vertical central back splat. The leather scroll back features lovely oak carved caps above the shaped supports at the front of the chair. The buttoned stuff over seat has been newly sprung and webbed to ensure that the seat is supportive and extremely comfortable to sit on. The upholstery incorporates traditional horsehair fillings. The underside of the Victorian oak desk chair seat has been finished with hessian. The bow-fronted seat is finished with brass studwork to its perimeter. The Victorian oak desk chair stands on elegant carved tapering legs to the front, with splayed legs to the rear, and terminates on its original brass castors.
