Description

Fabulous 18th Century Dutch bombe bureau bookcase with fantastic satinwood veneers. The panels of the doors and the fall front of the bureau have attractive marquetry decoration. The two doors of the top section open to a shelved interior, a small cupboard and four small drawers with brass inset handles. The cross banded fall front opens to a fully fitted interior that will accommodate all your office supplies with its fitted pigeon holes, shelves and drawers. This sits on three cross banded graduated drawers with attractive brass handles and escutcheons. It splits into two sections for easy transportation to and around the house. This striking bureau bookcase will provide you with an amazing home office. This 18th-century Dutch Bombe bureau bookcase is a stunning example of craftsmanship from that era. The bookcase features a beautiful curved design, characteristic of the Bombe style, with a rich, polished wooden finish. The upper section comprises two glass-panelled cabinet doors with intricate inlays, providing an elegant display space for books or decorative items. Below, the bureau has a slant-front writing desk that opens to reveal a well-appointed interior with s...
