Description

An unusual and scarce version of the principal part of Rome's Pantheon which would usually have a colonnaded portico, whereas this model only has the ruined column bases. It would have originally included a removable domed roof which it now lacks. Italian circa 1880. The framework around the double doors has a piece missing to the top right-hand side, there is some chipping to the stepped horseshoe shaped base and the lower section, inscribed Pantheon, has some repaired breaks.
