williamgreenwoodfineart@gmail.com Yorkshire artist Walter Meegan showed his talent early. While still a student at Leeds School of Art he won first prize for a painting of a baby sleeping in its mother's arms. After marriage, he travelled to the United States and opened a studio on Fifth Avenue in New York where he gained great acclaim and moved in circles appropriate for gaining prestigious commissions. However, the death of his youngest child and his wife's homesickness meant that the family returned to Yorkshire – first to Leeds and then to Scarborough, where the family settled. It was at t...
