Description

This is a stunning quality antique English Victorian oak dining table, with ebonised decoration, in the Pugin gothic style, circa 1850, extending to 15ft, which seats up to 18 people, in excellent condition. The quality and design of this table leads us to believe it to be associated to the renowned cabinetmaking firm "Gillows Lancaster", however the majority of their furniture was not stamped and this table is not stamped either. The extending dining table benefits from a solid oak top with a stunning rich oak colour, with a moulded edge, above a skirt frieze. The four leaves continue the same design, incorporating a skirt frieze, which is a true sign of quality. The oak dining table is raised on four oak legs in each corner, supported by a fifth leg to the centre of the dining table. The legs are designed with octagonal shaped knees, finely decorated with ebonised rings and inset domes, above ebonised fluted tapering legs, which terminates on the origin brass castor cups and porcelain wheels. The oak dining table consists of two identical "d" end halves, which are attached via the original metal barrel winding mechanism. The winding mechanism and runners are in ...
