Description

A superb and large pair of wall sconces from the early Regency period. In original condition without any restoration apart from a good clean. We believe that they would have been created right after the death of George III due to the black painted doves which would have been a sign of mourning. This was evident in much furniture during that period. The eagles hold a chain in their beaks which terminate with a carved tassel. Please see the photos with our dog (Bailey) who kindly posed to demonstrate the size. May be collected from our showroom or please contact us to discuss delivery. options.Payment by bank transfer or PayPal
