Description

Sculpture depicting "Les Roseaux" in Bronze. Acclaimed for his large scale public sculptures, the noted Art Nouveau sculptor Francois-Raoul Larche is today perhaps best known for his three bronze figural table lamps featuring the American dancer Loie Fuller, which were produced by the leading Parisian foundry Siot Decauville. The model is illustrated in a period Siot-Decauville catalogue which details that it was available in two sizes, one approximately 73cm high and the other variant approximately 160cm high. Whilst three examples of the smaller version have sold at international auctions since 1991, bronze figural works of this scale and calibre from the Art Nouveau period are hard to find. Cast Signed F. Raoul Larche.
