Description

A late Regency period exquisite little clock in superb condition. The eight day duration fusee movement with Anchor Recoil escapement, shouldered plates and offset winding. Behind just a 4" diameter bowed and painted iron dial with it's original cream coloured base paint, outer minute track and inner Roman numerals. Also having it's original brass edge protection ring. The matching steel hands being of 'open moon' style and behind a cast brass and locking bezel with snapped-in bowed glass. Contained in a mahogany case with low-arch top and the front being inlaid with Grecian style brass. The arch is above a brass strung ebony block moulding to three sides. The portion below the dial is broken with a double reeded moulding. The short, straight and proud plinth is also inlaid to the front and stands upon four brass ball feet. The sides are plain and the back has a rectangular glazed and locking door. *This is one of the most original and prettiest of this kind of 'bracket clock' I have ever seen. The small size is extremely rare. Dimensions: 10 3/8" high x 6 3/4" wide x 4 1/4" deep. Condition: The movement is running perfectly and keeping time. It has been maintained...
