Description

This stunning, yet elegant mahogany striking table clock boasts the highest quality workmanship associated with this fine period of clockmaking excellence. A truly stunning mahogany case would not look out of place amongst the highest echelons of society, with the beautifully silvered dial and comprehensive movement to match. This is a wonderful clock that would complement any collection. Movement: The substantial 8-day spring driven clock movement runs two fusees for the going train and hourly strike train striking a single bell to the top of the movement with original verge escapement. The back plate of the movement is beautifully engraved with foliate scrolls and signed "Ellicott, London". Case: The sophisticated mahogany clock case is a real statement within itself. The clock benefits from glazed side viewing panels to both sides with lockable glazed doors to both the front and back of the clock, with a full front door and bezel, has an inverted bell top, surmounted by a brass handle with lacquered brass foliate-cast mounts and surmounted by a brass handle. The front door is set with brass foliate cast blind frets above the moulded base mounted on brass block feet. ...
