Description

A good pair of bronze female nudes, one holding a snake, the other a (dead?) bird. Modelled and signed by Charles Cumberworth (1811-1852). The first bronze features a nude female standing on straight left leg, holding a snake in her left hand to her breast. Her right hand holding a bunch of flowers to her hip. Her hair is tied up in a swirl with a flower adornment. She stands 12 inches (30.5 cm) tall on an integral base which features a naturalistic ground with grass and flowers. Signed into the rim of the base is "C. Cumberworth" and "E. Quesnel". A label on the underside of the base appears to read "L' Immueua" (?). The diameter of the base is 4 inches (10cm). The second bronze in this pair has her plaited hair tied up in a swirl, she is holding an apparently dead bird with her right hand to her right breast. Her left arm hangs loosely to her left side, with head bowed. She stands with her right leg bent, standing on a small bunch/stack of flowers. The naturalistic base is integral to the figure and is signed to the edge "C. Cumberworth" and "E. Quesnel". She stands 12 inches (30.5 cm) tall. The diameter of the base is 4 inches (10cm). A label to the underside of the ba...
