Description

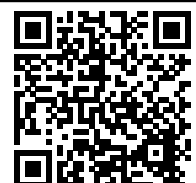

This salt-bag ('namakdan' in Persian) has a very unusual design - certainly not one I have seen before! Two ivory birds-heads lozenges can be seen in the lower madder-red ground with what appear to be three stylised 'trees-of-life' above and one tree in the neck of the bag. The main border is in an attractive shade of golden-yellow which contains a continuous vine, symbolising the eternal cycle of life. The back is more typical of Shahsevan weavings having narrow horizontal bands of different colours. Made by Shahsevan tribes in the Varamin region of north-central Persia circa 1900. Was £850 now £700. Size: 46cm x 35cm (1' 6" x 1' 2").
