Description

A P & O travel poster from the 1930s . Lithograph on paper. Dorothy Newsome 1900-1980, commissioned by P & O to create a range of posters. She was one of few women designing poster artwork at this time. Newsome used her visits to India to inspire her colourful artwork at a time when travel companies wanted to show more than the mode of transport. Printed by the Lamson Agency Ltd. London. The poster is unbacked and in unrestored condition and was framed by a previous owner to preserve its condition. Some creases, a tear to the left hand side and evidence of where the poster was pinned for display. Retaining all its vibrancy this is a lovely poster and super unrestored condition, with no trimming of its edges. Dimensions are for the poster only
