Description

Edwardian revolving bookcase This Edwardian revolving bookcase was made circa 1900. The colour of the top is slightly darker than shown due to the showroom lighting. The top with the central circular feature panel of flame mahogany, and a further stringing and cross-banding. These features make this so much more elegant, something you would expect of this elegant era. This is a high-end example, where the base has the cast iron supports that were originally fitted to stop the wobble. Most revolving bookcases do not have this type of base and so can be quite unstable when they are filled with books, this system was designed to alleviate this. Imagine the pleasure ownership of this bookcase will bring you as well as the fantastic storage it will give your book collection. 50cms wide 19 3/4ins 50cms deep 19 3/4ins 85cms high 33 1/2ins All Measurements are as accurate as possible.
