Description

Aquatint entitled Mixed Styles Regency – Victorian – Modern from John Piper's Brighton Aquatints. This aquatint shows a view drawn looking westwards along the promenade to Brunswick Terrace, at the point where Bedford Square opens out on to the front. The corner house is one of the Regency series that surround the square in grey-painted stucco, with characteristic pilasters, verandahs and bows. Beyond it is an imposing Victorian building, and beyond that again the block of flats known as Embassy Court, designed by Wells Coates. In the words of John Piper, 'Each of these buildings, in design and materials, belongs very much to its own age, and each is excellence of its kind. The designs are, retrospectively, pseudo-classical, florid, and modern-severe. The materials are, respectively, stucco, brick and cast iron, steel and glass and concrete. This aquatint is from the edition of 195 uncoloured prints out of the total edition of 250. Print: Length 38cm; Width 25cm and Image: Length 27.5cm; Width 19cm Condition: Very good for a print published in 1939; they are no discernible blemishes A copy of the front page of the publication signed by John Piper will be provided to the P...
