Description

Regency mahogany library chair This Regency mahogany library chair was made circa 1820. The Regency mahogany library chair has been upholstered by our expert in a raw English hide, imagine the skill and patience it takes to gently tap each of those hundreds of brass headed studs. Once this was done, we then handed it to our specialist (who worked on the British Royal collection) who then started on the laborious and skilled work by hand of building the colour to give it olive-green leather and then again built up to our antique finish, that then compliments the wonderful frame. It is tub shaped with the elegant mahogany frame, with the turned open arm supports that runs down the ring turned front leg and original brass cup castors. Imagine relaxing into this wonderful library chair, that could also be used behind a desk. 58cms wide 23ins 101cms high 39 3/4ins 61cms deep 24ins 48cms seat height 19ins 50cms seat depth 21ins All Measurements are as accurate as possible.
