Description

This is an early, wooden dial English wall clock in a maghogany case. This attractive clock can only be described as "sleepy and untouched". The 8 day duration, gut fusee movement with tapered plates, knopped pillars and Anchor Recoil escapement. Also having a substantial pendulum and unusually, a transit locking bracket. Behind a 12" diameter flat wooden dial with its original paint. The cream coloured background has an inked outer minute track and short Roman hour numerals. Above the centre is the maker's name of "SLY" and below is the place "WEYMOUTH". The open moon hands are matching and the dial is behind a locking, cast brass 'Sheraton' style concave bezel with flat glass. The case has a narrow moulded edge surround that is part of the one-piece dial. The back box has the usual access door to the right hand side and the curved bottom has a cockbeaded door. Sly is listed as working in Weymouth circa about 1800 and is known to have made many good clocks. Dimensions: 14" diameter surround x 6 1/4" deep. Condition: Completely untouched for most of it's life, this clock is totally original including working bezel lock and the dial paint. The movement is fully work...
