Description

Fine early C19th Regency period "Old Sheffield plate" wine-cooler by Matthew Boulton & Co. . Campana-shaped wine-cooler crisply cast with a deep band of classical anthemion decoration around the body . Raised on a leaf-cast circular socle base . Acanthus leaf wrapped handles with grape and vine-leaf cast detail where they join the body. The body engraved to each side with finely detailed and skilfully-executed noble armorial crest . The underside bearing the punched star or sunflower marks of Matthew Boulton & Co. . Fitted with a removable rim and inner sleeve liner for ice . Matthew Boulton & Co , of Soho House Manufactory , Birmingham , were leading and highly-esteemed producers of fine quality silver-plated wares of this type, using a technique of fused copper and silver sheets first developed in Sheffield during the C18th . In excellent original condition with only minor wear to one small area of the silver plate on the top edge . H 11" D 10" W 10" England c.1815
