Description

This is a fine quality antique English Georgian Regency dining table, with a stunning figured mahogany tilt-top, of rectangular shape, to seat six people, circa 1820, in excellent original condition. Also known as a "breakfast table", the table boasts a top-quality solid two-piece top, displaying a stunning figured grain pattern. The Regency dining table retains its original brass locking latch, which allows the tabletop to be tilted vertically for storage and to show off the lovely grain configuration on the top, or removed for easy transportation. The dining table incorporates solid brass thumbscrews either side of the hinges, which secure the table top to the pedestal. Removing these brass screws detaches the table-top from the pedestal base. The Georgian breakfast table is raised on a central ring turned pedestal column, which terminates on four sturdy splayed legs. The legs rest on the original solid brass decorative castor toes & castors. The Regency dining table can comfortably accommodate six people and is sufficiently tall enough to comfortably fit your knees underneath. It is also sufficiently wide enough to accommodate serving dishes in the centre of th...
