Description

A rare Elizabethan Joined Oak Livery Cupboard , Circa 1600 , small proportions and of historical interest , carved with the Fleur-De-Lis . Wonderful colour and patina built up over a period of more than 400 years , slightly canted upper section with two carved cupboard doors with carved central panel , above a full length drawer retaining its original iron work the surface intricately carved with the Fleur-De-Lis , four carved Elizabethan supports , original patinated pot board shelf at the bottom . This cupboard has survived the passage of time extremely well with minimal repairs , still retaining all its original boards including candle shelf , back boards held in place by hand made nails . An extremely rare find of exceptional colour and originality, exquisitely carved with the fleur de lis pattern . The Fleur de lis symbol came to represent the French monarch's divine right to rule . Fleur-de-lis, (French: "lily flower") , also spelled fleur-de-lys, also called flower-de-luce, stylized emblem long associated with the French crown . During the Tudor period English monarchs continued to prominently call themselves kings of France . Northern France was ruled by ...
