Description

Rare and unusual late 19th century ritualistic axe, c1880. It is cast in bronze or copper and shaped in a traditional South East Asian ancient style, but from the decoration and form I think it is Tibetan or Mongolian. This is undoubtedly a Shamanic/ritualistic piece as the blade is not sharpened and there is something inside which makes a rattling sound. The decoration is lovely and different on both sides and the handle is shaped as the head of a mythical beast. The metal has taken on a lovely rich colour/patina and overall condition is good. Price includes FREE UK delivery, please contact me regarding international shipping. Size: 28cm tall x 25cm wide x 1cm deep, weight 0.8kg.
