Description

A Georgian period, in chippendale country vernacular taste, set of four, elm framed with leather seats, dining chairs, Circa 1780. These chairs constructed in quality attractively figured English elm, feature a yoke top rail and pierced back splat. Drop-in seats recently reupholstered in the traditional manner, re-covered using the old leather which has been sympathetically restored. Square front legs with inner chamfer, splayed rear legs, supported by H-stretchers. A handsome and very good quality set of period chairs, in very good condition and ready to use. Dimensions: These chairs measure approximately 96.5 cm (38") tall, 50.5 cm (20") wide, and 47.5 cm (18.75") deep. The seat height is approximately 47 cm (18.5"). Condition: Please see the pictures for details of the items condition. - These chairs are in a very good condition commensurate with their age, and are structurally sound and sturdy. There are some minor age related marks and blemishes on the frames. No loose joints. Recently reupholstered, in traditional manner. The original leather was reused, filling and patching the old splits from the inside. It has been nourished and cleaned, to extend its life an...
