Description

Royal Worcester porcelain figure entitled "Paddy" (The Irishman) model No: 835, by the famous modeller James Hadley. This is one of nine figures from the Countries of the World Series, first produced in 1881/1882. A slightly disheveled red-haired gentleman wearing waistcoat, crumpled hat, breeches and jacket with tails, the bearded figure is modelled standing adjacent to a wood effect post with brick paving underfoot. Mainly in cream coloured parian, but with gilded highlights and painted skin tones to the face and hair. Worcester factory marks clearly visible on the base. Condition: No chips or cracks, a few signs of wear to the gilding in places, consistent with age. Dated: Black and embossed Worcester factory marks consistent with the date 1882. Dimensions: Height: 7 inches (17.8 cm). James Hadley (1837-1903) was an English potter and artist and by 1870 had become the principal modeller at the Worcester Royal Porcelain Company. Until 1895 his work was produced almost exclusively by Royal Worcester, he later set up his own factory. Described by John Sandon as 'probably the finest English modeller of all time'. Able to work in any form of style required, he is best known for his work in the 19th century.
