Description

We are delighted to offer this Magnificent solid silver Georgian tray/salver made in Dublin 1833 by James Fray. The salver presents an array of remarkable and striking features such as the applied cast-silver border, an intricately chased inner wreath and a fine engraving of military interest in the centre. The cast-silver border is profusely decorated in rococo fashion with vine leaves, grapes and acanthus scrolls - all intricately interwoven and pierced to form a majestic outer border. The inner wreath is equally noteworthy with a superbly chased design consisting of acanthus leaves, flowers and Griffin figures. The centre of the salver is beautifully engraved with a Crest and the following message: "Presented to Lieutenant Colonel Gustavus Rochfort by the Nobility, Gentry, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County of Westmeath". The salver is supported by three cast-silver feet. The salver presents full Irish hallmarks that are clearly marked on the top of the inner wreath. This salver most certainly presents a magnificent and intricate charm to its design whilst also retaining a practical size allowing for numerous uses. With a touch of creativity, thi...
