Description

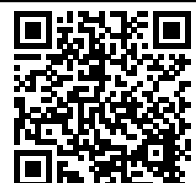

This is a fine quality antique English Chippendale style armchair, constructed of solid mahogany, during the Victorian period, circa 1870, with a newly upholstered seat, in excellent original condition. This is a large sturdy chair, with generous proportions. The chair is constructed from solid mahogany and is designed with a shaped top rail and pierced fan back. Elegant splayed arms, incorporating elegant scroll carved ends, unite the back and seat frame, which are raised on shaped supports. The Chippendale style armchair drop-in seat has been newly upholstered to a professional standard in a pale duck egg blue structured cotton upholstery, finished with traditional webbing and hessian to the underside. The seat is firm but extremely comfortable to sit on. The Chippendale arm chair stands on cabriole legs at the front, terminating on well carved ball and claw feet, with sabre legs to the rear. The Chippendale style armchair boasts a stunning rich brown mahogany colour, having been cleaned and French polished in our workshop, along with years of care and cleaning it has received. This Chippendale style armchair would look superb in the hallway, office or library.
