Description

A 17th century Dutch oak cabinet of nice small proportions and finely balanced carvings to the moulded panel doors. Having a moulded cornice top above the top section. The two sections below have large doors with fine textured central patterned carvings, flanked by squared and fluted pillars, with working locks and keys. The bottom half of the cabinet has the larger storage space, with one shelf. The sides are also panelled giving this cabinet and architectural contemporary feel. Standing on huge, turned bun feet to the front.
